One of Light and Faith, Reaching Back to the Year 432.

When Glorious St. Patrick First Set Foot on the Soil of Erin.

Seven Thousand Churches Were Erected During His Apostolate.

CREATED ARMAGH HIS METROPOLIS

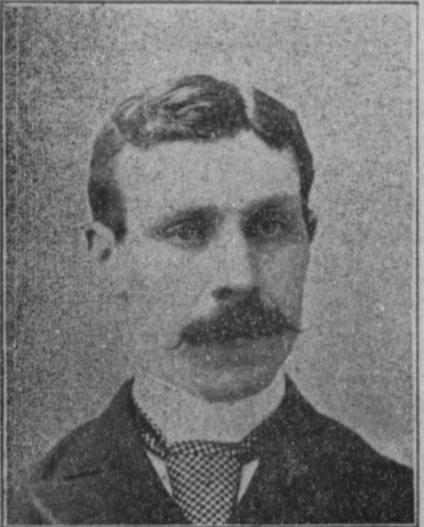

"Westward lies an isle of ancient fame,
By nature blessed, and Scotia is her name,
Unraveled in books, exhaustless in her store
Of veins of silver and of golden ore."

FRANCIS G. CUNNINGHAM.
Will appear as Robert Emmet in the St. Patrick's Day Celebration.

Her fruitful soil forever teems with wealth,
With gems her waters and her air with health;
Her verdant fields with milk and honey flow,
Her woolly fleeces vie with virgin snow,
Her waving furrows float with bearded corn,
And arms and arts her envied sons adorn.
No savage bear with lawless fury roves,
No ravenous lion through her peaceful groves;
No poison there infects, no scaly snake creeps through the grass, nor frog annoys the lake—
An island worthy of its pious race,
In war triumphant and unmatched in peace."

In the annals of the Druids there was a prophecy that foretold the coming to the island of a man of God who would change and perfect the belief of those simple yet royal minded people. But like the Jews with Christ, they looked to his coming as the era of a new political dynasty of great pomp and power, instead of a peaceful, religious transformation. And again in the ancient archives of Trinity College, Dublin, there is said to be a prophecy relative to the coming of St. Patrick. The religion of pagan Ireland seems to have been of a milder type than that practiced by other Celtic nations of Europe and by the Scythians. Baal, the sun, and Samian, the moon, were their chief divinities. Baal fires glowed on every hillside May 1 and November eve. All-hallow'een was sacred to the moon and dedicated with feasts and superstitious ceremonies. There was a poetical mysticism about their belief that hallowed every spot as the home of superior beings. The roaring waters and tempestuous winds were but the voices of those divinities, while the soft breeze was but their breath, the placid wells and streams their mirrors. There is little wonder that Druidism had such a hold on the hearts and minds of these primitive people, when after fourteen centuries they continue to people the earth with fairies and even yet hear the wail of the banshees wafted on the gentle zephyrs of evening.

St. Patrick landed in Ireland in the year 432, during the first year of the pontificate of St. Sixtus III, and the fourth year of the reign of Laghaire as monarch of Ireland. From the first day he set foot on the beautiful soil of Erin his mission sion seemed to absorb the attention of the nation even, as writers say, "to the exclusion of all other affairs." On Easter eve St. Patrick arrived at a place now called Slane, on the north bank of the Boyne. Here he rested with the intention of celebrating the festival in sight of Tara. It was penal to light a fire within Ireland and presented him with many rare relics, among them a linen cloth stained with the blood of our Saviour. These on his return to Hibernia he deposited in a chest behind the great altar of the Cathedral. In this church it was for centuries the custom at Easter and Pentecost to produce and venerate these holy relics in the presence of all the people.

It is said by historians that this great apostle traveled constantly on foot, in imitation of the early apostles of the church. When he received gifts, which he frequently did, from Kings and Princes, he hastened to give them away, deeming it more blessed to give than to receive. His appearance was dignified and engaging and impressed beholders with the sanctity of his life. He was well educated and thoroughly versed in Latin, Irish, Gallic and English. Historians can proudly point with unerring accuracy to the fact that it was the first thought of this great saint and of all the countless other eminent sons of the Roman church during the early and middle ages to rear schools and colleges for the lowly and ignorant, that the church might better flourish when the fruit of knowledge was being gathered along with the faith. He is the author of many epistles, canons and proverbs, also of a work entitled "Of the three dwellings: Heaven, or the Kingdom of God, the World and Hell."

Before his death St. Patrick was forewarned by an angel that he would not die in Armagh, his own see, but in the Monastery of Saul, in Down. Here in the midst of a large assemblage of monks, for he had at this early date founded convents both of holy men and women, as well as built churches, he breathed forth his blessed spirit into the hands of his Maker. His historical writing of him rightly is he called a Prophet of the Most High who foretold so many things to come. Rightly is he called the Apostle of Ireland, seeing that all the people thereof and the other islanders are the signs of his apostleship. Rightly is he called a martyr, suffering so many snare and conflicts from idolaters, magicians, rulers and evil spirits. Rightly is he called confessor and virgin, so that he is numbered among the angelic choirs and the assembly of all saints, who was the share in all holy acts and all virtues.

Thus died on March 17, about the year 493, the illustrious Bishop who baptized and blessed the sons and daughters of Ireland. At his death it is estimated the province before the King's bonfire appeared during the celebration of the solemn convention. St. Patrick, either not knowing their custom or not caring about it, lighted a blazing fire in front of his tent, which, though eight miles from Tara, was plainly visible there. There was, we are told, much consternation among the Druids, who informed the King that "unless yonder fire be this night extinguished he who lighted it will with his followers forever reign over the whole island." True prophecy. For Patrick, in spite of the opposition of the Druids, was invited by the King to speak to the people on the following day. St. Patrick preached to the people in the presence of the King, who was so impressed that he gave him permission to preach the new doctrine throughout the kingdom without fear of molestation. Success followed this great man at every step. Then as now the church adapted itself to the needs of the people. The new converts from Druidism saw in the baptismal font where they were immersed the sacred well at which their fathers worshipped. The Druidical stones on the "high places" were transformed into the Cross of Jesus. The sacred grove was consecrated anew to religion and the word Dair, or oak, so often combined with names of churches in Ireland mark in later centuries the favorites which they superseded.

Let it be remembered as a token of female piety that the daughters of chiefs and a wife of one of the Kings of Ireland were the first to embrace Christianity. But it was especially in Connaught that St. Patrick wrought his most wonderful miracles. The two beautiful daughters of King Laghaire received instructions and were so ravished with the delights of the holy faith that after receiving the sacraments their virgin souls were immediately ushered into the presence of the God of happiness. The ancient name of the palace of the Kings of Connaught is now called Rathcrogan and contains the remains of several Eastern forts. It was at Cruachan Aigle St. Patrick betook himself to spend the season of Lent. This latter was in the County of Mayo, and it was from this place he drove before him the several tribes of serpents and venomous creatures into the Western ocean, from which all Ireland is to this day exempt. For seven years he labored in Connaught, being joined thereto by the Bishops Secundinus, Auxilius and Isernius. This was in 439. We find from this point St. Patrick went to Ulster, founded a church in Donegal and foretold here the birth of great Columba, who was a descendant of King Laghaire's son Fergus. In Armagh we find our saint building the famous rock church, the dimensions of which were given to him by an angel. In fact the building of all Armagh is jealously ascribed to St. Patrick, who instructed the workmen it should be the metropolis and the mistress of all Erin. Having completed the great Cathedral of Armagh and converted the conservatively that seven hundred churches had been erected and seven hundred Bishops and three thousand priests had been consecrated and ordained by this intrepid worker in God's vineyard.

In closing this short sketch of our patron saint, what can be more beautiful than the words of the saintly poet Father F. W. Faber?

"All praise to St. Patrick, who brought to our mountains
The gift of God's faith, the sweet light of His love;
All praise to the shepherd who showed us the fountains
That rise in the heart of the Savior above.

For hundreds of years
In smiles and in tears
Our saint hath been with us, our shield and our stay;

All else may have gone,
St. Patrick alone—
He hath been to us light when earth's lights were all set,

For the glories of faith can never decay,
And the best of our glories is bright with as yet,
In the faith and feast of St. Patrick's day."

AFTER LATEST STYLES.

Miss Kate O'Brien, the well-known modiste, is at present in New York City, where she will spend from ten days to two weeks attending the openings of the metropolitan pattern houses, in order to obtain for her clientele the very latest modes and leading styles.

DESERVED PROMOTION.

Frank G. Cunningham's friends will read with pleasure the announcement of his promotion to an assistant chief clerk by the Louisville, Evansville and St. Louis Railway Company. Mr. Cunningham has been with this company for several years, during which time he has acquired a thorough knowledge of the railroad business. None congratulate him more heartily upon his advancement than his fellow clerks and railway acquaintances.

DOWN TO WORK.

The Hibernians Will Adopt Measures to Increase the Membership.

Financial Standing of the Order in Jefferson County Gratifying.

Two Divisions Hold Interesting Meetings and Initiate Members.

YOUNG MEN AND CONSOLIDATION

The annual reports of the State and County officers of the Ancient Order of Hibernians have been forwarded to all the divisions in the State. They show the order in Jefferson county to be in splendid condition, the five divisions in this city having several thousand dollars to their credit. There has not been the increase in membership during the past year that had been hoped for, and therefore the members are appealed to to follow the example being set in other localities to double the membership, which in Louisville should number at least 4,000 men.

These suggestions were given careful consideration at the meeting of Division 1 last Tuesday evening, being thoroughly discussed by President Keenan, David O'Connell, Tim J. Sullivan, John Mulroy, Patrick Liston, John J. Keane and others. The matter was finally referred to a special committee consisting of John Mulroy, James Rodgers and William M. Higgins, with instructions to prepare plans for carrying out the recommendations made and inaugurating a campaign that will produce the desired revival in membership in the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

There was a good attendance when President Tom Keenan opened the meeting. After the approval of the minutes and the transaction of routine business the Sick Committee reported that it had nothing to do, as there were none on the list.

James P. Tracy was initiated into the order and four applications were received and referred.

The special committee preparing a new initiatory degree for Division 1 reported progress, the chairman stating that they were arranging one that would embrace many excellent features and be second to none. All the members are now devoting their time to the St. Patrick's day celebration, hence the delay.

Among the visitors present were Frank Cunningham, President of the Young Men's Division, whose report on the entertainment at Masonic Temple tomorrow night elicited warm applause. Tom Cody, the popular brewer agent, who had been absent from many meetings, was also given a hearty reception.

Division 4 met Wednesday night with its usual large attendance, and President Hennessy conducted the business rapidly, adjourning the meeting at an early hour that members might witness and participate in the rehearsal for Sunday night's performance.

There was pleasure over the return of John Brown, who had been ill for some months, and Nick Smith, who was initiated. Besides transacting routine business reports of the county officers were read and several applications for membership received and referred. There was manifest disappointment because Pat Fallon could not remain through the session.

The meeting of the County Board will be held March 28, when all representatives are expected to be present.

No action has yet been taken by either Division 6 or Division 1 upon the question of the former being merged into the older division.

CONDITION CRITICAL.

Miss Mary F. O'Connell, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David O'Connell, has been critically ill at her home on East Washington street for the past three weeks. For ten days she was in a semi-unconscious state and her recovery was despaired of. Miss O'Connell suffered from a sudden attack of brain trouble. Yesterday her physicians reported her as improving, and the friends of the family hope the danger point is now past.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Michael McDermott, who has been confined to his home on Missouri avenue, Jeffersonville, as the result of a fall Sunday evening, is reported much better. Mr. McDermott was walking along the Dixie track when he slipped and fell before an approaching train, sustaining serious bruises about his face. But for the timely arrival of assistance he might have been run over. Mr. McDermott is over sixty years of age.

THE IRISH CAUSE.

We think the time has come when the Irish people of this country who withdrew their support from the national cause at home because of the seeming hopelessness of the leaders' quarreling should get together again and consider means for helping the fight for Home Rule once more. The quarrel is now composed, the party is once more a unit for political action and the most important results may be looked for now that the ship is once more in fighting trim.

The fight can not be carried on with any practical efficiency unless the hands of the party are strengthened. The skeletons of the former organization in this country, which rendered such invaluable service in the past, are still in existence, and not much effort ought to be needed to clothe these dry bones with muscle, nerve and flesh. Irish sympathy is just now being freely expended on the Boers. There is a land and people at home whose claims are far higher, and it is high time to recall attention to this most important fact.—[Catholic Standard.]

TODAY'S SERVICES.

MASSES IN HONOR OF ST. PATRICK IN ALL THE CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

This morning the anniversary of St. Patrick will be commemorated in the Catholic churches of the city by the celebration of Pontifical high mass. The services at St. Patrick's, St. Louis Bertrand, Sacred Heart, St. Cecilia's, St. Brigid's and St. Michael's will be very brilliant and impressive, particularly those at the three former, where the choirs will be largely augmented for the special musical programme arranged for this occasion.

Owing to the demands of our advertising patrons we are compelled to forego publication of extended details of the services, which will in all cases be largely attended.

PEEKING'S

Reminiscence and Comment Upon a Great Editor's Writings.

Editor of Kentucky Irish American:

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 10.—Dear Sir: Until a few years ago the Courier-Journal was the most uncompromising foe of England in this country. Its editorial department fairly blazed with exposures of British brutality, duplicity, rapacity and insolence. I recall one editorial in which the writer proved that England was a good attendance when President Tom Keenan opened the meeting. After the approval of the minutes and the transaction of routine business the Sick Committee reported that it had nothing to do, as there were none on the list.

James P. Tracy was initiated into the order and four applications were received and referred.

was our hereditary enemy; that she seized every opportunity to bully and belittle us; that our citizens were maligned and our institutions ridiculed by her, and after further proving her guilty of every crime and misdemeanor in her treatment of weaker nations, he demanded revenge—yea, verily, revenge he must have. If we are going to whip anybody, by all means let it be England, quoth this twister of the lion's tail. But see what a change has come over the aforesaid editorial department. No more lion baiting, no more jokes about the Queen's increasing avordupois or racy stories about her blackguard son. Oh, no! those things are all forbidden now. In their places we find laudatory phrases, showing the beauties of English government, liberty, civilization, magnanimity, bravery and even of her State and church. Prominence is given all dispatches which blind the unthinking to her flagitious course in South Africa and news tending to show the true state of affairs is rigorously excluded. What has caused such a complete change? Surely not the alleged help of Great Britain during our war with Spain. Even the lowest grade of fools in America knows that she never loaned us a man, a ship, a gun or a dollar, and it requires but little sense to see that had Spain triumphed England would have helped her celebrate the victory over those dirty Yankee dogs and proved conclusively that she was Spain's only friend and kept Europe from aiding the United States. The reader may form his own opinion as to the reason of the Courier Journal's change of front, but I hope he will not accuse Queen Victoria of touching Henri Watterson with her golden rod.

Watterson, Watterson, where have you been?

Over in London to see the Queen.

Watterson, Watterson, what did you do?

Tendered my help and allegiance, too.

Watterson, Watterson, what came next?

Well, to tell you the truth, I was rather perplexed—

She showed me the grounds, the garden and house,

The while I kept still and discreet as a mouse;

Till finally she asked if in days gone by

I was loyal to England, and if not why? Says she, dear Henri, I've read some skits in the Courier-Journal that gave me fits, And you know 'tisn't right for a Tory like you

To question at all whatever I do.

If I have a mind to create a new tax,

Plunder the Boers or slaughter the blacks,

TO OUR FRIENDS.

Well, here we are, St. Patrick's day in the morning, and what do you think of us? We leave you to pass your judgment. We have endeavored to give you a clean, respectful, non-partisan organ, not forgetting to defend you and your cause and interests as occasion required. That our efforts have been appreciated is fully attested by an increased subscription list and advertising patronage. What benefit or pleasure the paper has been to you and yours is for you to say. While we are grateful for the interest and assistance of friends in the past and have striven to give a good return therefor, we hope for further approval in the way of increased subscription and patronage, enabling us to add to the merits, efficiency and size of the Kentucky Irish American, till it becomes what it ought to be, what we desire to make it, and what the Irish people deserve it should be—a first-class journal, replete with all news of interest to them, a defender of their cause, an advocate in their behalf, a pride and a joy to all. We are anxious to be able to do this—the sooner the better—and if our friends will do their part in seconding our efforts, next St. Patrick's day will give to them a paper far ahead of the present issue in every detail that will meet with their approval and pleasure.

DUPPLICITY AND FLATTERY.

The great interest manifested in the celebration of St. Patrick's day, not only encouraging, but ordering its observance by officials in South Africa and England, with the profuse flattery of the Irish people by the British Government, is not only hypocritical and ridiculous, but so palpably affected and insincere as to be contemptible and offensive to the Irish people, who very properly resent it.

The order that Irish soldiers in the camps in South Africa should wear the shamrock, and the visit of the Queen to Ireland to show her appreciation of the loyalty and valor of her Irish subjects, finds a fitting culmination in the last order of London's Lord Mayor that the Irish flag be raised over the Mansion House in that city on St. Patrick's day. No Irishman worthy of his country regards this as an honor to Ireland, but as a piece of flattery and insult that presumes on their credulity—really a caricature and burlesque of them and their natal day by those who have no respect for it or sense of justice for them.

It is all done under pretense of marked appreciation of the Government for the bravery of the Irish troops in upholding British interests in South Africa, directly contrary to the sentiment and yearning of the Irish people, who have for the British in that conflict neither sympathy nor good wishes. Thus Ireland's natal day and her emblems are to be used as a means of glorifying reverses to the cause they approve and success to their oppressor in its efforts to crush out the liberty and national life of a brave people, struggling for that for which Ireland in centuries has suffered so much at the hands of the same foe. Indeed, the shamrock and Irish flag are not honored by this, but desecrated by being used in a false sense, that misrepresents all that are emblematic of, and must arouse the resentment and indignation of every true Irishman.

If the English Government really appreciates the loyalty and services of the Irish it should repay it in something more than mere tinsel at best, but in reality by insulting Irish nationality. Not a bill for the benefit of Ireland, not a measure for relief of the Irish people, not a promise of reform in the government of Ireland, not a redress of a single grievance, not a protest against unjust regulations, not a petition for mitigation of oppressive laws, has been as much as considered by the Government in Parliament—though any or all of them could be promptly passed did the Government but consent, which it would readily do if it really appreciated and feel grateful to the Irish, as it professes.

On the contrary, despite all the outward manifestations of respect and gratitude for Ireland, wearing of the green and waving her flag on English Government buildings, her representatives in Parliament are ignored, their appeals for action on Irish measures disregarded, and all efforts toward enactment of anything for Ireland barred by arbitrary rulings at the instigation of the Government majority. The Irish people are denied all justice, relief, reforms; their representatives are unheeded, derided, insulted—but the Queen, the lords, the cockneys in London, the Irish soldiers in South Africa, will wear the green and the Irish flag will float on the breeze over the Mansion House, and all Ireland should feel honored and her people grateful and proud of the respect shown them and their natal day and their hearts go out in unison of praise and benediction to the good Queen, who in the fullness of her graciousness has granted them this mark of her grateful appreciation.

We fully appreciate the favors of advertisers as shown in this issue, and recommend them to our readers. When buying give them a call. There are firms in this city who for reasons of their own, not necessary to state, can not be induced to advertise in the Kentucky Irish American. Perhaps they do not care for the patronage of our readers. Those who favor us with their advertisements evidently desire and merit your custom, and as all of them are such as we can command to our friends, we ask for them consideration and a visit when you wish anything in their line of trade.

We congratulate the New York Gael on its anniversary and wish it success and prosperity. It is an Irish magazine excelled by none printed, and we take pleasure in commending it to our readers.

The "Big Store" doesn't advertise in weekly papers. Perhaps it doesn't care for the patronage of the readers of weekly papers.

YOUNG LIFE ENDED.

Miss Mary Phelps, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zack Phelps, died Monday night at her home, 1410 East Broadway, after an illness of but ten days of typhoid fever, and the sad news came as a shock to her many friends and acquaintances, who did not know she was seriously ill. Miss Phelps was a student at the Girls' High School, a highly accomplished and beautiful young lady and one of the most popular in the East End. Her funeral Wednesday morning was very largely attended.

REPORTED IMPROVING.

Mr. James Barry, has been suffering from an attack of muscular rheumatism for several weeks at his home on High avenue, and his hosts of friends are hopeful that he may be able to be out St. Patrick's day.

Noid came as a pleasing surprise to their hosts of friends. Miss Montedonico is a handsome blonde and very popular, and since her debut has been a recognized leader in Italian society circles. Mr. Noid is connected with Buschmeyer's drug store, and is a very promising young business man. His acquaintances all congratulate him upon the winning of so lovely a bride. Their marriage will be solemnized at the Cathedral on Wednesday afternoon, April 25, Rev. Father Weiss, the groom's uncle, performing the ceremony. Prof. Charles Weiss, who is the grandfather of the groom, will be the organist for the occasion. This promises to be one of the most notable of this spring's weddings, and will be attended by many from a distance.

DANIEL M'UGH.

Former Louisville Boy Goes to Join the Boer Hospital Corps.

Messrs. Thomas and Terence McHugh last week received letters from their brother, Daniel McHugh, who formerly resided in this city, stating that he was one of the party of thirty-nine young Irishmen who left Chicago recently to join the Boer hospital corps.

Daniel McHugh, who is only twenty-four years old, came to this city from County Mayo, Ireland, about ten years ago, and was employed as a plumber by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company until his removal to Chicago. He was well known here and made many friends.

He is a veteran of the Sixth Illinois Infantry, having served Uncle Sam through the entire Spanish war, and when his regiment was mustered out was instrumental in having that body volunteer service in the Philippines, though they were never called upon by the War Department.

There are a number of others ready to leave for South Africa should another corps be formed, one Indiana physician having left his address with the Kentucky Irish American for that purpose.

IRISH MICHAEL MAHONY.

Like a sturdy Irish rebel, where the swift Tugela roars,
Is Irish Michael Mahony, a-fighting for the Boers;

Not fighting for the Queen, my lads, nor for a battered crown,

Is rebel Michael Mahony, from Tipperary town.

There was nothing like a wild hurrah when Mahony marched away,
No Majors great nor Captains thundered orders to obey;

He was a Major, Captain, private, too, and his heart was in command, When he stepped aboard the steamer that was headed for the Rand.

With a sprig of shamrock near his heart, plucked from old Sliemamon, He jumped upon the Durban wharf and hailed the rising sun, And he sang not "Rule Britannia," nor, my lads, "God Save the Queen," But a stave of Fenian "treason" and the "Wearin' of the Green."

One look upon the sunlit sea, one toward his Irish land, And rebel Michael Mahony was tramping for the Rand;

Across the veldt he's gone to stay, where Maximus grimly frown,

And Paul Kruger's hardest fighter is from Tipperary town.

The veldt is still beneath his feet, the sun is warm and white, his assistants to bring the paraphernalia for the initiation. The women became greatly frightened and wanted to go home, but their exit was barred and all had to become candidates.

A huge hobby horse was lugged in. Then a large washtub and a barber's chair. The women shivered and were more than frightened when eight tall men covered with sheets and wearing masks walked in holding a large tossing blanket.

But where was the goat? The women watched the door closely and eyed their husbands and friends who sat on the opposite side of the hall enjoying the fun more than they were. Suddenly the big double doors flew open and in bounded a big black goat. The women yelled and matters began to assume a serious aspect.

After all the implements had been arranged, cards were distributed among the ladies, each bearing the name of some historical character. When this name

FATHER RYAN'S MEMORY

Monument to the Poet Priest Will Be Erected in Norfolk.

The memory of Father Ryan, the poet laureate of the South, is to be honored by a monument to be erected in Norfolk, Va., his native city. The project is in the hands of the Daughters of the Confederacy, who are now taking the preliminary steps toward enlisting the support of the public for the work of love. There will be no difficulty in securing almost any amount required.

Mrs. James N. Leigh, State President of the Daughters of the Confederacy of Virginia, stated that while the matter was still in embryo, a committee has been appointed to reclaim the plot in Elmwood cemetery where lie the unknown Confederate dead. This will be handsomely fenced with stone, bayonet spikes and cannon balls. The monument of the poet priest will occupy the exact center of this resting place of the unnamed dead.

PRINCE PATRICK.

The appointment of the Duke of Connaught to be Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in Ireland recalls an incident which decided the Queen to give him the name of Ireland's patron saint. When the Queen and Prince Albert visited Ireland in 1849 an old lady in the crowd which welcomed Her Majesty to Dublin exclaimed, as the carriage in was called the holder of that card was supposed to come forward and be initiated. This was done so that the person would not be embarrassed on hearing her name made public as the next victim. Father Neptune then directed his assistants to blindfold all the women. That created a big disturbance, and many vowed that they would never be blindfolded. For twenty minutes the women held out and refused to be blindfolded, and it looked as if there would be no candidates for the night. After much persuasion the bandages were placed about the eyes of the women and they were lined up on one side of the hall, with their backs to the center. Then the fun began as the lights were turned down.

The first woman called answered to the name Princess Philippino. The blanket was heard to flap and the screams of a woman could be heard a block away. Other names were called and the same performance gone through with. After it was all over the bandages were removed and the women were surprised to see a gentleman standing in front of each with a plate of cake and cream waiting for her. More than that, they learned that not a single one of their number had been initiated or tossed up in the blanket. The names called were held by none in the party, a Miss Margaret Harding having answered for all and acted as a decoy to carry on the joke. Every time the blanket struck the floor she had screamed, and whenever a new candidate was called forth she changed her voice to suit the occasion and went through the same performance again.

DRAMA IN COLORS.

Dora Martin was usually considered by those who knew her to be one of the prettiest girls in Theydon.

Just now, however, she is more serious than usual. She is seated in a big basket chair on the lawn under a clump of old trees that served to give the name of The Chestnuts to her aunt's house, and her lips are pursed together as an expression of intense misery settled on her face. "I hate her," she exclaims, passionately. "Oh, how I hate her! She comes here and she turns everybody's head in the village with her pretensions superiority and her affection of great powers of intellect. They all think she must be lawfully clever just because she has become the editor of the Ladies' Budget, that old-fashioned, stick-in-the-mud kind of journal; but I knew her at school, and I learned then what a shallow humbug she naturally is."

"Who is a shallow humbug, Dolly?" queries a voice at her elbow, and the girl catches sight of the broad shoulders of her barrister cousin, Nigel Forester.

"Shall I tell you, Dolly?" he continues gravely, bending down over and looking very earnestly at her; "you mean Margaret Delbos—and I wouldn't have thought—"

"What?" fiercely demanded Dora, darting a sudden look at him.

"That you would have been so unmerciful as to even think cruelly of that girl."

"It doesn't matter to me a bit," she answers fiercely, "what you, Nigel Forester, are gracious enough to think about my womanliness or otherwise. Margaret Delbos is something more than deceptive in appearance; she is actually deceitful."

"How do you know that?" cried Nigel, all the color fading from his cheeks. "Some stupid village gossip says so—"

"It is not stupid village gossip at all, Nigel," said Dora steadily.

"Do you remember Ethel Cheveye?"

"The poor blind girl you introduced me to at the last garden party aunt gave? Of course I do. She's a poet, isn't she?"

"Yes," replies Dora. "And that was the cause of the mischief. She sent some laundress to copy it out and send it to the Ladies' Budget in her own name and from her own quarters. If Margaret Delbos is as dishonest, inefficient as you suggest, she will probably buy it and publish it under her own signature in her Christmas number."

Seated alone in his chambers in Pump

Budget has this year been a great success. The place of honor is filled—at least so says the Weekly Bulletin—by an exceedingly clever story by the cultured editor, Miss Margaret Delbos, entitled "A Drama in Colors."

Rumor has it that this exceedingly talented author is so pleased with the popularity of that work that she has resolved to reproduce it at an early date in book form.

But Nigel, happy though he is in Dolly's great-hearted love, does not permit this.

A curt letter from him, returning the check for $15 she sent to his laundress, and warning her that her frauds were known, cut short the literary career of Miss Margaret Delbos, and the Ladies' Budget is without an editor.

Now Dolly wants to go up to London and to help, if possible, her old rival. And Nigel says she shall do so, and he will aid her. But not until she has become his wife.—[Boston Globe.]

TELEPATHY IN ANIMALS.

Many of the curious things which years ago we were told were only "superstitions" or "old women's talk" are in the march of intellect and science being laid open to our ken. The telepathic instinct in dumb animals explains many queer things. Of course the explanation is far from satisfactory, but it is the beginning of the end. To scientists even that much is gratifying. The saying "rats desert a sinking ship" led to the discovery last year of a hole in a ship's bottom that eventually saved the ship and the lives of all on board. Witness the peculiar intelligence shown by horses, likewise elephants, in places of danger; also that of dogs on the death of a beloved master. These are accounted for by the telepathic principle. What, if anything, lies beyond to these animals will doubtless not be so easily discovered.

LOVER OF HIS MOTHER.

Of all the love affairs in the world none can surpass the true love of a big boy for his mother. It is a pure love

Court Temple a few days later, however, Nigel Forester is not so sure that the trap he has so carefully prepared is either manly or honorable.

Now as he thinks of a woman's loneliness and temptations in these fiercely competitive times, against the whole world of literary jealousies, a great pity for her—or is it love?—seems to come upon him.

But as he muses there arises in the mist before him the sweet, trustful face of his cousin Dolly—Dolly, who is ever ready to champion the weak against the strong and sinful—the Dolly his mother longs and prays some day he may take to wife.

"And I have promised her that I will do this thing," he groans. "I will keep my word, however bitter may be the cost. If Margaret Delbos be this living fraud, it will be well for her to know that nothing, no, not even a literary fame, built on lies, can endure."

December has come at length. Dora Martin and her aunt have hurried up from sleepy old Theydon and scampered all over Oxford street and Bond street and Burlington arcade in search of Christmas presents for their kin.

At last, tired and breathless, they hail one of the crawling hansom that move perpetually through London's busier thoroughfares, and are whirled eastward to the temple, where Nigel awaits them with some impatience.

A few minutes later she and Nigel and her aunt are being whirled toward Liverpool street station on their way to their Essex home.

Today she notices that he is strangely silent. For a second she is puzzled to know what makes him so quiet and speechless.

Then she suddenly remembers that this is the day on which most of the leading papers issue their Christmas numbers.

Instinctively the two of them wend their way to the book stall, and the vivid green covers of a special number of the Ladies' Budget seems to mock at and dance madly before Dora's eyes.

"Oh, come away, Nigel," she cries impulsively, seizing her cousin's arm and trying to draw him toward a platform; "never mind about that stupid plan of ours; it was wrong, it was foolish, let it pass."

But Nigel does not move. Bending down, he looks at her with gravely reproachful eyes.

"Dolly," he says with a strange tenderness that draws her closer to him all in spite of herself, "have you forgotten Ethel Cheveye's grievances?"

"No, not that," gasps Dora, crying at last, but tears rolling down her cheeks; "but you know you care for her, Nigel, and it will hurt you."

"Dolly,"

It is such a small word, but spoken it was with such a depth of expression it reveals to the trembling girl that the months that have passed since they met have not only taught Nigel the secret of her heart, but the secret of his own also.

RETURNS TO IRELAND.

Miss Gonne Tells of Her Life Work—Delighted With America.

Before leaving for Ireland Miss Maud Gonane gave out the following interesting statement concerning her life and her work and the impressions formed during her visit through this country:

"In the first place, I dislike to be called the modern Joan of Arc. It makes me ridiculous. I am simply an Irish woman endeavoring to assist my Irish countrymen and the struggling Boers against the oppressions of the British. No, it is not true that I am of English parentage or birth. My father was a Colonel in the British army which gives rise and color to that story. I am Irish through and through and was born in Dublin. All my family and relatives, however, are Conservatives or Unionists—all against me. I have a sister married to Col. Pil-

MARTIN CUSICK,
State President Ancient Order of Hibernians.

cher, of the British army, now out fighting the Boers.

"I tried to keep my sister from marrying him, but I couldn't. I was educated in Paris, and what led me to espouse the cause of the Irish was the difference I saw in the condition of the people of France and those of Ireland when I returned there at twenty years of age. I witnessed the brutal evictions of the English and the outrageous treatment all around to which the Irish people were subjected. It made my blood boil, and I determined to raise my voice for the people of my native land. Our good work is going on. Ten years ago there were 38,000 Irish troops in the British army; now there are only 25,000, and there will be less. I expect to live to see Ireland free and independent. During Queen Victoria's reign the population of Ireland has been reduced from 9,000,000 to 4,500,000—just half. This has been done for a purpose—the people have been starved to death or forced to leave their beloved isle."

"I detest the English. The more you see of them the less you will like them. As a people they are fast deteriorating morally and physically. They are always putting the Irish and Scotch soldiers to the front in war. The English soldiers are of the scum and no good, as you see in South Africa. What we want to do is to keep the Irish from enlisting in the English army to fight the Boers or any other people. Wherever I have found the Irish in any country they are friends of liberty. Our Irish regiments did not want to go to South Africa. One regiment refused to go, and the men were handcuffed and forced aboard the transports. Another regiment threw their guns in the river, but they were driven aboard. The British flag was snatched by Irishmen from a regiment as it marched to the transport and torn to

SWEEPING CHANGES.

Irish Schools to Stop From One Extreme to the Other.

A correspondent announces that some sweeping changes will come into force on April 1 next as regards the national educational system in Ireland. No official intimation has yet been sent out of the change that it is alleged it is proposed to adopt, but it is stated that there is good ground for believing that what is known as the results system will be completely abolished, and the present English system instituted.

The Irish schools are to step from one extreme to the other, from strict, rigid, individual examinations annually, with payment to teachers dependent on passes in single subjects, to a method of repeated inspection and close supervision, with an examination once in four years only, the teachers' pay to depend on style and

THOMAS KEENAN,
President Division 1, Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Nothing. Our societies meet, pass resolutions, honor members, elect officers, confer strings of titles, pay dues, give each other a general jolly, as they say, and then adjourn in a sense of supreme contentment.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians is about the only society we know of that has done anything practical in this line locally. That worthy society furnished and equipped the excellent Cadet Corps of the House of Providence, and it is a credit to them. We should awake from our lethargy and make practical the principles for which our societies came into existence. There is altogether too much lode room lethargy rampant. What are all the testimonials and presents for faithful services as a presiding officer alongside the help rendered to one poor orphan in giving him a start in life? Our societies, as we understand them, were intended for something more than mere gossip caucuses or time-killing gatherings.—[Catholic Sun.]

NEW YORK STORE

INTRODUCING

New Spring Goods.

With the advent of each season the Louisville public naturally turns to the New York Store as the acknowledged criterion in "these parts" for everything new, bright, fresh and novel, well knowing that no effort or expense is spared to cull from the marts of the world the best creations of the master minds of mercantile fame. How well we shall meet the expectations of a critical public can best be judged by the plaudits of those who have already complimented us on our well and admirably selected stock. If you wish good values at a moderate price make your spring purchases at this popular and reliable store.

"ROBERT EMMET."

The following is the complete programme and cast of characters for the play of "Robert Emmet," to be presented at Masonic Temple tomorrow evening, under the auspices of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, for the benefit of the Boer hospital corps. The musical features will include a vocal solo by Mrs. Katie Costigan, who is noted as one of the finest singers in Louisville. Master Thomas Keenan will also sing and Thomas D. Cline will render a recitation of the "Top o' the Morning," which recently appeared in these columns. A pleasing surprise is in store for all who attend, and the Kentucky Irish American urges its readers to pack the Temple Theater on this occasion:

There was a fairly good attendance of delegates last Sunday at Beck's Hall at the adjourned meeting of the Central Labor Union and quite an amount of business was transacted.

Vice President James J. Martin presided with a dignity and ability that stamp him as a first-class chairman and parliamentarian, and his name is now being prominently mentioned for the Presidency of the Typographical Union, to succeed Walter Binford, who will not be a candidate for re-election.

Communications were received from the National Association of Stationery Firemen asking the aid of the central body in organizing that craft here. The matter was placed in the hands of the Organization Committee, who will cooperate with Organizer McGill.

An important circular was also received from the United Hatiers of North America, giving the names of local dealers who are handling non-union hats. Their names will be reported to the members of all the unions represented in the central body.

During the preceding week there was much talk relative to the action of the Central Labor Union in rejecting the propositions of those unions which withdrew about a year ago. The consensus

From the Famous Painting in the Rooms of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, New York City.

[WRITTEN FOR THE KENTUCKY IRISH AMERICAN.]

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

St. Patrick's day in the morning is with us once again, Its beauty is adorning field, mountain, vale and plain, And down each crowded city the long processions come To Erin's stirring ditty and the music of the drum.

Ten thousand voices cheer them as they go marching by, And others still who hear them take up the swelling cry, And shout, Hurrah for Ireland and for St. Patrick's day, All honor to our sirland and the famous shamrock spray.

The shamrock and St. Patrick and our beloved isle, And her devoted heroes, whom gold could not beguile, We'll cherish them with loyalty until we breath our last, Then bid our children love them wherever they are cast.

Then shout for dear St. Patrick and glory in his name, Let banners flutter for him and trumpets sound his fame, And let us pray by night and day that we may live to see His people blest and Ireland proud, prosperous and free.

fund, which were forwarded to Washington.

Division 3 of Elkton, South Dakota, at a recent meeting adopted ringing Boer resolutions and voted $25 for the hospital fund.

Division 3 of Adams, Mass., has succeeded in organizing a flourishing ladies' auxiliary. Miss Hannah Daniels was elected President.

The Hibernians of Harrison, N. J., have arranged for a public meeting for the purpose of collecting funds for the Irish-Boer hospital corps.

Covington, Frankfort, Ashland and Maysville are the only towns outside of Louisville that have divisions in Kentucky. There should be a dozen more at least.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Division 3 of Chicago celebrated the first anniversary of its institution by entertaining a large number of Hibernian friends at the Lessing Club House.

A division of Fall River will go to their Easter duty in a body the second Sunday after Easter.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Division 11 are arranging for a popular entertainment at University Hall on April 17.

Division 8 of Fairport, N. Y., succeeded in raising funds for the Boer hospital members. The officers were installed by County President Daniel McAvoy.

Division 5 of Albany, N. Y., will take part in the St. Patrick's day parade in Cohoes. This division attended St. Vincent de Paul's church in a body last Sunday and received holy communion.

There was a dancing party at the monthly meeting of Division 3 of Dover, N. H., that was largely attended and proved a most enjoyable affair. Light refreshments were served during the evening.

The State Board of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Minnesota has awarded gold pins to thirty ladies for their activity during the past six months in bringing in members to the various divisions to which they belong.

County President William Cronin, of Boston, addressed the members of Division 1 of Manchester, N. H., on the arrangements which are being made for the national convention to be held the last week in May.

The Hibernian Rifles of Dover, N. H., gave a delightful coffee party and dance to their friends at the hall of Division 1. Capt. John Redmond and lady led the grand march, which was participated in by a large number.

Rev. Father Kervick, who leaves Pipestone, Minn., for Baltimore because of failing health, will be greatly missed by the Hibernians. He was an active worker, and to make the order a success was one of his greatest ambitions.

St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark, N. J., will today celebrate with imposing ceremonies the golden jubilee anniversary of its founding. All the living priests and prelates who have been connected with the Cathedral will be present.

The Hibernians of Anaconda, Mont., have made elaborate preparations for their entertainment in honor of St. Patrick. Prominent citizens will take part, and from the interest that has been taken it will surpass all previous efforts.

The recent celebration of St. Bridget's day by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Division 1 of Baltimore included a concert and hop. The programme was an interesting one, with vocal and instrumental selections and an essay on St. Bridget by Miss Margaret Clark.

The County Board of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Minneapolis met last week with Division 5, and the large attendance showed the lively interest taken in auxiliary affairs. The combined membership of the various divisions in Hennepin county on January 1 was 735, the figures showing an amazing growth during the past year.

Milwaukee Hibernians will celebrate the anniversary of their patron saint with a grand entertainment at the Davidson Theater this evening. The proceeds will be placed in the Red Cross fund for the relief of the wounded Boers. Hon. John J. McMannam, a well-known Chicago attorney, will deliver the principal address. A patriotic festival will also take place in St. Patrick's Hall, where High Chief Ranger McMahon, of the Catholic Order of Foresters, will deliver the address. Both programmes include literary and musical exercises.

We are pleased to hear that a movement has been started by the Hibernians of Providence in favor of the erection of a centrally located hall to be used for society meetings and public entertainments. The idea is a good and practical one and we have no doubt that if our Irish societies take hold of the project success is assured. A hall of that sort will, to use the hackneyed phrase, fill a long felt want. There ought to be no difficulty in a city where our people are so numerous in getting funds for the land. Once a site is acquired the money for the building can readily be secured.

SENSATIONAL SALE

THE ENTIRE

GREENUP STOCK

THROWN ON THE MARKET AT

1/2 PRICE!

We have purchased the entire stock of Pianos, Organs and Musical Instruments of the Greenup Music Co. AS OUR WAREROOMS ARE CROWDED TO THE DOORS, we will for the next thirty (30) days sell the stock at just one-half original prices. This will prove the greatest sale in the history of Louisville.

88 PIANOS AND ORGANS MUST BE SOLD.LOOK AT THESE PRICES!

Nearly New $850 Steinway Upright, mahogany case	$425
A New $480 Chickering, mahogany case, for	$265
A New $400 Pooles Piano for	$195
A New $385 Mahogany Stutz & Baur Piano for	$187
A New Greenup Piano, in any wood, for	$175
A New $360 Haines & Co. for	$185
A large number of other new Uprights from	$115 to $225
A large assortment of good Second-hand Uprights—Steinways, Kurtzmanns, Haines & Co., Martins, Fischers, Kranich & Bach, Wissners and other well-known makes, from	$85 upward
10 Square Pianos—Steinway, Hinzen & Rosen, Kurtzmann and other makes	$25 to $85 each
GREAT BARGAINS IN ORGANS—Estey's, Ferrand & Votey's, Mason & Hamlin, and others	$8 to $49 each

Greenup's entire stock of small Musical Instruments at half cost. Get a Guitar or Mandolin at your own prices. This stock is new and fresh and is very fine, but must be sold with the rest.

This is the greatest sale ever held in the South. We propose to dispose of this entire stock within thirty days (sooner if possible).

In order to accommodate the large number of purchasers who can not find it convenient to call during the day, we will keep the store open until 9:30 o'clock every night this week.

It will pay you to investigate these remarkable bargains, even if you had not intended buying for some little time.

Purchasers living outside of the city are invited to write for special list of bargains in new Uprights.
